

Masonry Heater Association of North America
Annual Contest Results for 2011
Media: High-resolution photos are available on the Media Page

Bake Oven Category

First Place:

Jessica Steinhauser
Stonehouse Pottery
Guelfph, Ontario, Canada
stonehouspottery.com
Price: $16,000 CAN

This striking red tile indoor cook oven or “tischherd” was designed and built using eight shades of red for the kachel tiles, inspired by the famous French brand of Le Creuset cookware. The corners are beveled and stainless steel doors and trim were used to finish the look in a modern style home.

Masonry Heater Association of North America
Annual Contest Results for 2011
Media: High-resolution photos are available on the Media Page

Bake Oven Category

Second Place:

Dan Givens

Stone Castle Masonry

Esther, AK

stonecastle@gel.net

Price: $5,000

This Tuscan oven is the centerpiece of a ski cabin. The oven provides most of the heat for the cabin as well as wood-fired baking. The oven was built from native stone gathered by the owner on his own property.

Masonry Heater Association of North America
Annual Contest Results for 2011
Media: High-resolution photos are available on the Media Page

Bake Oven Category

Third Place

Marty Pearson

Stone Comfort

Cumberland, Rhode Island

Project cost $10,000

The husband in this family worked in a bakery for years and wanted to have the same experience in their home. During a kitchen remodel, they had us build a wood-fired oven using some of the old cobblestone that the customer collected.